Words Worth English Language Lab

Objectives of this session:
This session aims to help learners prepare and practice for situations where they meet people for the first time or after some time. The expressions listed below will be central to this session:

Look at the picture. How would you reply to the words spoken by these people?

- This activity acts as an ice breaker and introduction round for the class. Begin by introducing expressions used in greetings and for introductions
- Greet the class by saying "Hi/Hello" and introduce yourself
- Ask a pair of learners to introduce themselves to each other in front of the class
- Click on the Session 1 to display the page 1 Session 1 Meeting People and ask learners to read the instructions
- Ask learners to look at the picture and explain the scenario: these people are at hotel/convention area/ mall to attend a conference. Some of them already know each other, but some are meeting for the first time. Draw learners' attention to what they say
- Navigate through the slides on this page by clicking on the next button. Pause at each slide and read out the speech bubbles. Ask learners to try and read too
- Initiate different responses
- Ask them to open page 2 of their work book at the exercise corresponding to the page displayed on the screen. Tell them to complete the gaps in the exercise. Help them by answering some of the questions
- Now ask them to call out the answer they have written in the course book
- Click on the "Show Answer" button to display the answers and ask learners to check them. The answers will vary, but here are the most likely once

E-Resources

Providing access to scholarly journals is a challenge for the library and information centers today. To meet the problem of serial crisis as a result of rising in cost of journals much faster than the rate of inflation, proliferation in the number of journals and the paucity of funds available to the libraries, the concept of library consortium has emerged. Library consortium ensures online access to a large number of journals at a limited cost. We are providing here the links of various consortium and resources in India to enhance the quality of library services for the students.
